Dwyane wade net worth 2018 forbes

February 11, 2020, 3:25 p.m. / Updated February 11, 2020 , February 11, 2020, 8:35 p.m. / Source: TODAYBy Ree HinesDwyane Wade is a 13-time NBA All-Star and by the time he cut his jersey last year, he was among the best shooting guards to play the game. Now he, as a dad, is focusing on his most important work off-court. The father-of-four visited The Ellen DeGeneres Show on Tuesday to open up about the moment one of his children came out as transgender and how it changed him as a parent. Zaya, our 12-year-old, came home - I don't know if anyone knows, originally named Zion. Zion, who was born as a boy, came home and said, Hey, I want to talk to you guys. I think going forward and I am ready to live my truth. And I want to be referred to as her and her. I love that you call me Zaya, wade recalls. The new name was the easy part. Wade said he and wife Gabrielle Union set out to educate themselves on other aspects of supporting Zaya in the way she needed to. It was our job to go out and get information and reach out to all the relationships we have. My wife reached out to everyone with the cast of 'Pose,' Wade said, referring to the FX series about New York City's ball culture in the 1980s and 90s. When Zion came home and said, 'Call me Zaya,' and 'I'm ready to take this on,' I looked at her and said, 'You are the leader.' It's an opportunity to allow you to be a voice, the 38-year-old explained. For now, she's 12 years old, so it's through us, but ultimately through her. DeGeneres applauded Wade's process, saying, What every parent should be is what you are now - it loves your kids unconditionally and supports your kids whoever they are. Wade told her it came naturally to him and union. We are proud parents of children in the LGBTQ+ community and we are equally proud allies, he said. We take our role and responsibilities as parents very seriously. So when a child comes home with a question, when a child comes home with a problem, when a child comes home with something, it's our job as parents to listen to it and give them the best feedback we can to give them the best information they can. That doesn't change because sexuality is now involved. Meet Zaya. She is caring, loving, smart and we are very proud of her. It's okay to listen, love and respect your children as they are. Love and light a good man. pic.twitter.com/G2LVdD2VT— Gabrielle Union. @itsgabrielleu, February 11, 2020, Union on Tuesday expressed how proud Zaya is by sharing a video on Twitter offering advice to those worried about who Zaya is. Be true to yourself. If you're going to be the one you're not, what's the meaning of being on this earth? Meet Zaya. SheAffection, whip smart and we are so proud of her. It's okay to listen, love and respect your children as they are. Love good people and be light, Union captioned the video. Lee Hines Dwyane Wade candidly reveals how he has changed as a parent and person to better support the growth of his child Zion Malachi Eerraki. From day one, I saw my son finally come in, the former Miami Heat player, 37, said of the 12-year-old on Showtime's All the Smoke podcast on Wednesday. And for me. Nothing changes in my love. Nothing changes in my responsibilities. So all I've had to do now is educate myself smarter. And that's my job, added Wade, who is also Carvia James' father, 13 months, the guardian of Xavier Zecharya, 6, Zaia Blessing Dwyane, 17, and nephew Davveon Morris, 18. The proud father said Zion and all the children inspire him. First of all, you want to talk about strength and courage, my 12-year-old has more ways than I do, Wade said on the podcast. You can learn something from your kids. The NBA star added that he and wife Gabrielle Union talk about making sure our kids understand power in their voices. We want them to be people who feel they can be in this world. That's our goal. Understand that you can't be anyone or whatever you are, he continued, adding that it comes with helping them not only navigate their sexuality, but also grow up as young black people. In addition to open conversations, Wade said it's also important to look inside yourself and examine your possible reactions and prejudices. My wife and I are having a conversation with us, noticing that there was no [Zion] in the atmosphere of the boy Zaia was riding in. And I looked at myself in the mirror and said, What would happen if your son came home and said he was gay, what are you going to do, how are you going to act? He knows who he is. It's about you. Who are you? Wade also addressed his reaction to the wave of backlash his family received after family photos showed Zion dressed on a crop with long paint nails as he celebrated Thanksgiving this year. I've seen some post-Thanksgiving hatred socially about family photos. Stupidity is a different world from this world we live in, so I get it. But here's the thing - I was chosen to lead my family, not y'all. So we will continue to be who we are and support each other with pride, love and smiles! The retired NBA star wrote on Twitter at the time. On Wednesday, Wade said he felt a responsibility to speak out for a lot of people who don't have the same voice as me. I'm speaking for a lot of other people in the LGBTQ+ community, Wade said. All the people out there, say these things and look at themselves. Understand that you are the one with the problem. You are the one with the problem, he continued. It's not the kids, it's not the kids who decide. 'Yes, you were born in a certain way, you have to be like that.'Life, not man. Wade went on to say that it is different people who don't understand the uniqueness of others, and that members of the LGBTQ+ community are normal. This is the new normal. So if someone is different, we look different. things that don't understand it. what you don't get it. What gets stuck in the box, you know, they are different. People here don't live their lives athletes, he added that he doesn't care what his kids want to do with life, he just wants to be there to support them along the way. You want your children to be free and live their lives. And I don't care what you want to do from this point of view. If you want to play sports, play sports. You must not be like me. Play your sport and be yourself, he said. It's my job to support you for what you want to do and make sure you have all the tools you need to be as happy as you can in this world while you're doing it. You're going to grow up while you're growing into who you are now. So they make no difference, they are normal. Not understanding it is a different thing. At least for Dwyane Wade, coaches, bosses, and teammates may not provide you with the most useful advice. It comes from grandma. June 13, 2017 15 mins + By the time Read Dwyane Wade turned 27, he had already led Marquette to the NCAA Final Four, won an NBA championship with the Miami Heat and led Team USA to gold at the Beijing Olympics. He's good at basketball, he's good at basketball, he's going to continue to be good at basketball. Thus, we end the basketball story with this piece. Even in the era of expertise and stick-to-sport, Wade has built a brand outside of basketball as an investor and fashion designer. More than just shoes (alcause he has a shoe deal with the Chinese company Li-Ning), Wade designed high-fashion looks for Dsquared2, made ties for tie bars and invested in stance socks. He has major deals with Gatlade and Amazon. He wrote a best-selling book and sold a TV show to FOX. And while Wade might not have enjoyed so many opportunities without his basketball success, there's no denying he's making the most of his brand. Even in the digital world, which checks twitter updates every five minutes, the man Shaquille O'Neal once called The Flash was the exact opposite. Over the course of a decade, Wade has slowly laying the groundwork for what he hopes will one day become a business empire. He chatted with entrepreneurs to explain his vision. In 2012, he took a chance when he left the Jordan brand for Li-Ning, which is relatively unknown in American basketball. What does it take to try something new while still establishing something?What challenges did you not expect? For example, I'm going out with a Nike family (through Jordan) and you learn from them. I've associated it with longevity brands. Like Gatlade, I've been ing up with Gatladé for a long time. Early in my career, I associated myself with all sorts of brands. After that, when I felt like learning and wanting to try something new, have more control or do something different, that's when I decided to step out and do something like a Li-Ning deal. Especially because it's China and it's a completely different market. But that's why you want to do it. If it was easy, you wouldn't want to do it. But you know it's going to be a bit challenging, so when you put in a job and build something, it's sweet. Talking about building challenges and something, it seems rare to do the same thing twice. You have activewear on missions. Watch with Hublot. Ties with tie bars. But you do things, and what is it next? And it's no coincidence. What we've been doing is building a brand that's as authentic as possible. So, with the exception of Li-Ning and Dsquared2, everything we sell is accessories. It's really built from the ground up. The ultimate goal is that one day someone like Tom Ford is not just wearing your clothes. You want to see people using your Cologne, using your Kindles to build such a legacy. Now we are taking steps. We are learning. We are getting our feet wet in the fashion industry and our name there. How do you build that connection when you meet these established brands? Do you first love the brand and then meet the people behind it or vice versa? Well, I think it's different because I want it to definitely feel authentic, right? You want to feel good about talking about it. So, you want it to be real first. But sometimes there are brands that interest you and you may not even have heard of them. So, you do your research. Or look for something going on in the world you want to join. There are different ways, but the best way for us is always to be authentic. What are some examples of times when I was surprised by brands and partners? when I signed with a tie bar, the tie wasn't - you know how it's going to come and go, depending on the style, right? So when they approached us to be a part of it, I thought, Well, I don't really wear a lot of ties. But then it was built from there, saying, Let's go to the meeting and see what they have to say. In the end, I just wanted to be part of a tie bar. I love what they do and I love the feeling when I wear a tie. And then things in fashion come back. That's also a Chicago company, isn't it? That issense, then. What about your relationship with Dsquared2? I read where you said you were a third brother [with Dean and Dankaten]. So when I went to their fashion show in Milan, I became a fan of Dsquared2 in 2011. Big fashion show in Milan, and I just loved their show. It was different. They had all these dancers and things. So I went back and met them. From there, we built a relationship to the point where when they come to Miami, they come to my house and eat. And that [line about being a third brother] was what I threw out at them: I'm D, you guys are D - it would be cool if I was like a third brother. Just joke with them. But that joke turned into our collection together and it's the first thing I've done in that capacity. [Magic Johnson] said, if you're on a plane or doing something, write it down and send it to your team. You have a great team, so allow them to do their job. But that must be what you want to do. 'I've definitely learned a lot. Hopefully, whether it's Dsquared2 or other brands, I want to keep doing other things to learn. One of the big challenges for readers is branding. They need a brand to start a business, but they don't necessarily have one yet. In particular, is there anything that stands out in a meeting that made you want to make something new a chance, or something that you said really stood out to someone else? It's a pretty good person back. Right. I reached out to Magic and he was kind enough to meet me and my team in LA a few times. If you're on a plane or doing something, write it down and send it to your team. You have a great team, so allow them to do their job. But I need what I want to do After that meeting, my heart is racing and I remember thinking, Oh, I want to do this or I want to do it. My business manager still thinks I have an email I sent her - like 13 ones. I may not have done all of that year, but over a period of time, you can see that things have happened. Just sitting there with Magic, there's a very successful person who listens to him and tells you how he did it. It was simple and still difficult. But it had to come from me. Once I was able to tell the team what I wanted to do, they were able to go out and find the right people and me or partner with them. What do you do when you're designing, do you go to a fashion show or get inspired and see what you need to write it down and send it off? You had a pair of socks camouflaged on top and ended with stripes on your toes. Why do you come up with that? So I put people downA person I trust and who is talented enough to achieve what I want to do. We work together. I came up with my idea and she came up with her idea and we put it together. I could look at this [flower arrangement] and think, I like it. And I take pictures. - Draw a picture on the red and black striped wall and take a picture. I'm assembling socks. The top looks like that [flower], and the bottom can look like that [stripe]. Just look at what you like. Related: 8 reasons why a strong personal brand makes you successful, my team comes back to me and they have their style inspiration and we mesh it together. We understand what we want to tell with these decisions and what stories we want to tell. And if I find something like this in China or anywhere, it works too. It was something we had that we just got when we traveled around China. Or you may reach out to brands to see what sells and what people are looking for. It's all collaboration. You just talked about China. With your shoe line and wine company [Wade Cellars sold mainly in China], it seems to have been a business priority for you. yes, definitely with wine. The market is very large. Obviously I have a good brand over there, especially matching myself with Li-Ning and building relationships. I have good things to go over there, so I may keep building. I spend a lot of time there, so they see me as one of their own and I'm in their home brand. But I'm still doing my thing in America. It's about trying both and trying out how to succeed in both markets. Did your relationship with Li Ning begin in '09? It was crazy. I didn't start with them until 2012. I think I was trying to switch to Jordan with Converse at the time. After the Olympics I was switching to Jordan so it could have been the last time I wore Converse. Then I switched to Li Ning in 2012.So after being with Jordan for 3 years. I didn't think about it. I remember meeting Mr. Li Ning, but I don't remember thinking. Oh, someday. I mean you met him then. I wondered if I had built a relationship from No. No, they've seen me from afar. They liked my brand and what I was doing and wanted to be part of the brand. It went from there. Talking about different markets, you have Chinese shoes, Swiss watches and local deals in Miami and Chicago. You're also one of the first athletes to get an Amazon bundle, and they're putting some of your products in one place, and at the same time Amazon is paying $50 million to stream NFL games. How do you see the future ofOnline business?Well, that's a good thing -- I thought we met them for the first time last summer and I didn't think we were where we are now. Obviously, they're big juggernauts now and it was so cool when I got the word that they wanted to do things with us. If you sit here and say, Dan, I got my own shop on Amazon, it just proves that you don't know what's going to happen next. So all of me is to keep building relationships, see what works and what I can learn from it, and move forward from there. But Amazon -- they're great. As you know, in this world today, where everything went to commerce online, they are big players. The Wade brand's one-stop shop has so much here and there that having what we've always wanted is kind of cool and put a juggernaut to bed. So hopefully we will continue to grow and learn from it what we can do and do better to see if we can do more. Have you learned from Amazon in particular? We've just launched everything, so now we need to keep knowing what's working and understanding. This is why they did this. As a team, we learn. We are always willing to learn and listen. If you sit here and say, Dan, I got my own shop on Amazon, it just proves that you don't know what's going to happen next. I'm sure a lot of your focus needs to be on this deal, but is there anything that excites you right now? My one thing is, if we do one thing right, there will be more to come, so I try not to go too far. I mean, we started with just one thing, but now there's a lot. Related: Six lessons entrepreneurs learn from LeBron James you don't know what's going to happen. For example, let's look at a mission. I signed with The Mission in 2009 and now the mission is one of the leaders [in my investment]. Obviously, stance socks are working, but in activewear the mission is killing it. So, with the brand you're with, you never know you're going to jump or focus. So I don't just want to focus on my current project. I want to be aware of what's going on all the time. Image credit: Courtesy of Rubenstein PRIs, who you look at now and say, He's doing something true to his brand that I really admire? Just going into the world of sports, I see LeBron [James]. Look at [David] Beckham. To look at them, and obviously [Michael] Jordan and Magic - but to see what they've built for themselves is incredible. Everyone has their own way of doing it. The way I do it is different from the way they do it, and I think I have the potential to do a good job, build more and do more. But there are definitely a lot of people out there doing great things. Many people think you can't always stay true to yourself and grow self-promoting at the same timeThey seem to have done it. How did you emphasize this? Yes, you don't just want to match yourself with people who are established and doing great things, you do what you want to do. Especially if you are successful. Like a stance. We definitely had success with stance. When you have success with a brand, you get interested in other brands. Because they think ,Okay, he's successful and he's done it this way.. Success really helps everything. Switch gears: you've just finished your season. Now you are in New York. Just launch and run the Amazon page. We released the Dsquaed2 line earlier this spring. When do you rest? What is that? Do you really feel that way? our entrepreneurs always say, When you start a business, you will never be able to sleep again. Was it true for you? But do you know what I'm going to do? For example, I'm going to Europe soon for Fashion Week. Fashion Week is in Milan, Paris, right? I'm going to take my son and wife and do certain things. Usually I have a better day when I work before the day starts. It makes me feel better and I feel like I've already accomplished something and I'm having a better day. I want to be successful in business, but I also have my regular life that I need to be good at, so I definitely need to understand it and schedule it very wisely. So, is it your rest? I'm here for business, but I'm going to do something fun for me while I'm doing it, yes, even when I get a few days to rest, because I just want to do something. Let me have a day to run away -- maybe a day or three, but I'd like to do something. Whether you have a game or business meeting to go to, do you do something in the morning when you are mentally and physically ready? When I work, I did a photo shoot, so it didn't work out this morning. I didn't work out because we were out late last night and had to get up this morning. But usually I have a better day when I work before my day starts. It makes me feel better and I feel like I've already accomplished something and I'm having a better day. Usually related: it's 11 habits of people who are really happy for me, so I clear my mind when I'm in the gym and when I work hard, I clear my mind, but I feel better about myself, my body and my mind being in the right place. Every successful business owner seems to say, I need to get up and work in the morning. I read their tips and said, I have to do it! and when I get home, I forget. [Laughter. Forget it, forget it, yes. I need to be better about it. We talked about how you always like to jump around on these occasions, going from amateur to professional. Then jump back to being an amateur again. What did you learn about it?But did you help that leap? go from amateur to pro? because you're pretty successful with it. Don't know. You try to match good people. It's all about the team. It's all about the team, but it starts with you. It starts with being the type of person you want to align with. I feel like a good person. I am a hardworking person. Because it succeeds, I want to match it with such people. Especially if it's your name and your brand. You have to be that type of leader. Leader.
